DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 19-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yasui et al in view of Imamura et al.

Yasui et al discloses in the figures a dome member 7 for use in a switch, the dome member being elastically deformable in use and having an annular rib 7b extending from the base. The annular rib and the side walls of the dome member form a generally V-shaped groove at their intersection. The edge of the annular groove of the housing is disposed within the V-shaped groove of the dome member at the apex thereof.

Yasui et al does not disclose the annular rib being thicker than the side walls of the dome.

Imamura et al teaches dome switches in a keyboard in which the side walls 11c of the dome 11 are thinner than the annular rib 11a.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to apply the teachings of Imamura et al to Yasui et al to form the annular rib portion thicker than the side walls because the thicker rib provides greater stability while the thinner wall provides greater flexibility of the dome for better switch operation.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments filed January 29, 2009 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. The annular rib is in fact the flange 7b and is not the housing. The groove is formed by the curved portion 11b of the base with the edge engaging within the V-shaped groove of the dome member at the apex thereof. The structure of the dome is the claimed subject matter and not its intended use. The combination provides the structure. The applicant's intended invention with the dome member being inserted within a housing with tabs folding there over is not claimed within claims 19-21. Therefore, the argument holds no patentable weight and is irrelevant. This also holds with reference to Imamura since no tabs are claimed nor that they are folded over.

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claims 1-15 are allowed.

Conclusion

5. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
